

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A unit for managing data stored in a data processing device which includes a first interface to applications which initialize access to the data and a second interface to an access unit which provides access mechanisms for different memory structures, the unit providing the applications with the appropriate data by 5 accessing the access unit. The applications are preferably produced on an object-oriented basis, the application being provided with the data by the unit already in the form of required objects.